Taub named city clerk in city reorganization

With no public hearings on the agenda, the Lemon Grove City Council breezed through a short meeting Tuesday night.

With only Councilman Craig Lake opposing, the council voted to urge the county to open the East Mesa Jail. Supervisor Dianne Jacob had asked all city's in her district to support her effort to get the jail opened, so Lemon Grove proffered its support. Lake stated that he felt it was a county issue, and that the council wouldn't like it if the county started interfering with city of Lemon Grove issues. The remainder of the council members felt that this issue affected the cities and therefore it was proper to express their opinion.

Coincidentally, the next issue was the passing of the mandatory recycling ordinance which was forced upon the city by the county. The ordinance passed 5-0, and was greeted with a smattering of applause from environmentally concerned citizens in attendance.

The ordinance states that, within 30 days of the adoption, single-family residential units must recycle newspapers, plastic bottles, aluminum, tin and bi-metal cans, white goods (appliances), and glass bottles and jars. On July 1, 1994, multifamily residential units will have to begin recycling those same items.

Also beginning July 1, 1994, all restaurants and taverns will have to recycle the items mentioned above, and office buildings of more than 20,000 square feet will have to begin recycling paper, cardboard and aluminum.

Beginning October 1, 1993, industrial recycling begins for dirt, asphalt, sand, concrete, rock and brush. In January of 1994, residents will have to recycle all yard waste - leaves, grass, weeds and wood materials from trees and shrubs.

At the previous meeting, City Manager Jack Shelver had proposed hiring a deputy city clerk to replace Sharon Propati, council services clerk. This proposal met with some objections, primarily the increased cost and that it did not separate the city clerk and city manager positions. So, after more staff discussions, Shelver introduced a new proposal, which met with better acceptance. It passed 4-1, with Lake opposed.

Under the new proposal, the finance director, Christine Taub, will become City Clerk/Finance Director. This is the same dual position which Karen Thomson Huff held prior to her retirement two years ago. The council's objection to this arrangement is that the city clerk reports directly to the council, while the finance director is under the city manager - putting one person under two bosses. However, the council felt that it had worked well with Huff and that it should also work with Taub. Lake praised the compromise and favored separating the city clerk functions from the city manager's, but voted against the proposal because he opposed downgrading the clerk position - also part of the proposal. As proposed and passed, Shelver will give up the city clerk function and will take over supervision of the personnel clerk. Taub will take on additional duties of city clerk and will hire a less-experienced records clerk to fill the vacancy left by Propati's departure.

In a rare move, to rush through a preliminary design study for the

Murphy honored for Youth Involvement by Lemon Grove Rotary Club

Rotary President Mike Irving presents a Leadership Award to San Diego Youth Involvement, Inc. Director Hura Murphy. Also pictured are Rotary Club member and Chamber of Commerce President Ernie Pero and Youth Involvement project manager Chester Terrell.

Last Friday, the Lemon Grove Rotary Club presented Hura D. Murphy with a Leadership Award for his 20 years of dedication to youth countywide through his non-profit organization, San Diego Youth Involvement, Inc.

"His organization does a lot to turn teens around when they are first getting into trouble," said Rotary President Michael Irving, whose 25-member club has been aiding the Lemon Grove-based organization with donations of clothes and holiday turkeys for the past two years.

Though it began as a program of the city of San Diego, for the last decade San Diego Youth Involvement, Inc. has kept alive a program for runaways and added several residential programs and a variety of counseling programs for troubled youths, battered women and pregnant teens.

The youths in these residential programs attend classes at the Lemon Grove headquarters.

"Originally, the city wanted to establish a program for runaways. I was working in Philadelphia with hard-core gang members before being hired in May of 1973 to put together a small program for the city of San Diego," he said.

In 1981 when the San Diego City Council decided not to continue funding its 10-bed group home for runaways, Murphy decided to operate the program himself, and sought donations from state, federal and county grants and private donations.

In addition to residential programs, San Diego Youth Involvement, Inc. also offers counseling programs aimed at developing self-esteem and classes in parenting and developing job skills.

Just last fall, the organization began offering a support group for Lemon Grove/Spring Valley area parents whose children are in gangs.

"All our programs have a focus on youth and families," said Murphy.

Annually, about 2,000 individuals pass through the programs.

Lemon Grove School District to begin addressing parent literacy with federally funded Even Start program

by Lindy Magner

The Lemon Grove School District recently won a $300,000, 4-year federal grant to implement Even Start - a program which is aimed at educating parents in hopes that their new-found knowledge will trickle down to their children.

"The goal of this program is to make the parent the child's first and best teacher," said Dr. Connie Fish, district assistant superintendent.

Coincidentally, the only other Even Start program in the county was begun last spring by Fish, then employed by the Chula Vista School District. There are 200 such programs nationwide.

Even Start is designed to increase the literacy of parents who never graduated high school, who cannot read, or who do not speak English and targets low-income families.

According to Fish, parents with at least one child under 8-years old will qualify for the program if they live within the boundaries for the district's "Chapter One" schools. San Miguel, Golden Avenue and Vista La Mesa elementary schools as well as Lemon Grove Middle School are designated as Chapter One schools based on a 20 to 40 percent population of low-income students, she said.

Once qualifying families are identified, they are paired with instructors who visit the home about twice a month, teaching parents how to create learning environments for their children as well as addressing the parents own educational needs.

"They will coach parents in how to read to their child and nurture an interest in reading; show them how they can even use the kitchen as a place for learning sorting and classifying skills; and coach them on how to be a good parent," said Fish.

She added that the instructors will also link families with agencies they might need.

"What we found in Chula Vista was that a lot of families did not even know what services were available; so we link them with the right agency, find them parenting classes or preschools if they need them."

She noted that program results have been encouraging, with parents inspired to improve their education.

"Many never realized that their own education was an important factor in their kids' learning," she said.

According to Fish, the district just hired a director to oversee the program. Identification of qualifying families will begin in the spring, with the program serving an estimated 48 families by fall.

Doxon's efforts pay off

by Bob Burns

Aircraft carrier veterans are elated to be finally having a memorial to their specialty of Naval service.

On Wednesday, Feb. 17, an 8-foot obelisk monument will be unveiled at the Old Fleet Landing on Harbor Drive in San Diego.

The event will take place at 11 a.m. and will be followed by a reception at the Holiday Inn at the Embarcadero, 1355 North Harbor Drive. The memorial will be hereafter named the Aircraft Carrier Memorial Plaza.

One of the instigators of this project is a local veteran, Charles M. Doxon who served as a pharmacist mate aboard the ship USS Kadashan Bay CVE-76. Doxon resides in Lemon Grove and is fiercely proud of his shipmates.

He continued his career as an x-ray technician after leaving the service, and recently retired, he is working full time in behalf of the Aircraft Carrier Veterans Association.

After attending several reunions, Doxon got the monument effort started and began raising money toward paying for it. The dedication of land by the city of San Diego has made this dream a reality.

The names of all the carriers will be on the monument, but it will be dedicated to the real heroes, the officers and enlisted men who bravely served aboard these fighting ships.

In their honor, this will be a lasting tribute to all who survived, and to those who lost their lives, aboard and beyond; the pilots who flew the planes, the repair crew who defended them, against all foe, maintaining readiness condition second-to-none, in peace and war.

Republican Women to meet

The Feb. 8. luncheon meeting of the San Diego County Federation of Republican Women will feature a musical tribute to Abraham Lincoln.

Participants include Bruce Henderson, former member of the San Diego City Council, who will read excerpts from Lincoln's speeches; and Bette Zurcher, 3rd Vice President of the County Federation, and a member of the Charlie Palmer Singers.

The primary speaker at the luncheon will be Dr. Barbara Stone, professor of political science, University of California, Fullerton.

Stone is expected to discuss the 1992 elections, and some of the results.

The meeting will commence at 9:30 a.m. in the Bahia Hotel, and luncheon will be served at noon.

The public is invited, but reservations to the luncheon ($20) are necessary. Call 729-5769 for information and reservations.

B-Words

Of city clerks

In Lemon Grove, we have a bureaucracy, but it has heart and common sense.

In these dire economic times when revenues are down and when the Big Brothers in Sacramento are pirating our tax monies, such attributes are pure gold. The family that we call our city government has the sensible attitude about our municipal machinery and has come up with a very responsible solution to our staffing problems.

The retirement of one Sharon Propati, a longtime and very valued employee, triggered the reorganization. I guess it would, in truth, be called a re-reorganization because we had to do a similar thing when our first city clerk/treasurer retired over a year ago.

Karen Thomson Huff made the city run like a well-oiled machine and left behind a well-trained assistant in Christine Taub. However, it was decided at that time that the city clerk's duties be added to the city manager's office. This saved us some money, but did add considerable work load to the shoulders of Jack Shelver. Without any additional compensation, it was an excellent financial move, but the bulk of the clerk duties were foisted off on Sharon and the now somewhat ethereal position of clerk was not the most efficient. We are a small town, and do not need a tremendous department for those duties as present in many other cities, but improvement was needed. With Sharon's leaving, another change was imminent.

The triumvirate of Shelver, Yount and Taub came up with a plan. It was addended by another slant from Jack Moore who is some kind of expert in these kind of organizational matters. Out of the discussions, the present plan was approved by the council and we are now back to a city clerk/treasurer with an increased staffing level that will suffice for the foreseeable future.

Jack Shelver is relieved of those mundane duties that should not be interfering with his other more important duties, such as redevelopment.

Christine was trained under the two-hat system and, with some additional study, will ably fill Karen's shoes. She will have increased clerical help as well as a raise in salary commensurate with her increased responsibilities.

The nice thing about the whole scheme is that it will actually cost us less money in the beginning than we are shelling out now. There will be some saving in relieving Jack of some duties, and the replacement clerical positions will be at beginning step levels. Where the original plan was to establish a new department head with clerical support, the cost would have increased by about $24,000 annually.

From my viewpoint, we should have a more efficient city clerk, a happier and better-used city manager, a council that is better served, and best of all, the knowledge that we are really doing the right thing in this depressed economy. I call it classic frugality and commend all concerned.

I did not get a chance to say good-bye to Sharon, and want her to know that I appreciated her kindness and assistance and will miss her very much.

If you have any questions or suggestions for Dr. Burns, send them to P.O. Box BB, Lemon Grove, Ca. 91946

ECEDC discusses East County

Describing the job of the East County Economic Development Council (ECEDC) as "regional job creation," ECEDC President Al Farias led a presentation in La Mesa, Tuesday, that quickly turned into a freewheeling discussion of East County problems by a select group of area leaders.

In addition to Farias and ECEDC Chief Administrative Officer Deanna Weeks, participants included retired county Supervisor George Bailey, El Cajon Deputy Mayor Harriet Stockwell, La Mesa funds. "Prop. 13 started the whole mess in the first place," he stated. Citing other state entitlements, he called for state recognition of local problems. "There is nothing else left to take away from local government," he said. "We must fight to make the state recognize that local levels need to make their own decisions."

A second theme, regarding outside perceptions of East County as a backward area, also surfaced. Weeks noted that, in her travels, she has found that attitude repeated often. Both she and Farias pointed to strong ongoing efforts to develop an East County marketing plan aimed at raising the profile of East County. "There are many pluses in East County," said Farias, "but our problem is in getting the message out. We are dealing with long-existing and, frequently, antiquated perceptions." He stressed that East County's best path is that of encouraging small business and then helping it expand.

These and other similar issues are expected to be aired at a Feb. 19 panel discussion in Santee.

Federal Boulevard area concerning drainage, sewers and the street, the council authorized City Manager Shelver to negotiate with consultants who would make the study, in order that the city might have the project ready to go in time to qualify for some of the federal funds that President Clinton is rumored to be about to release.

Shelver pointed out that it was urgent for the city to have the project ready to go within 120 days or it might not qualify for federal funding.

The drainage and street needs are obvious to those who travel on Federal Boulevard. Shelver added that the city had been told that the sewer had reached maximum capacity and would need to be enlarged.

The meeting began with a presentation by Mayor Cochran of an official proclamation honoring the Scouts of Troop 108 and recognizing the week of Feb. 6 as National Scout Week in Lemon Grove.

Joe Smithy represented Troup 108, with the backing of many Scouts and leaders in the audience.

Commentary

by Paul Treske

There is little doubt in my mind that tomorrow's history books will look back upon what is transpiring in this country today as shameful and inexplicable. We have seen the homophobia that surfaced with the growing openness of the gay community burst forth with all its ugliness over the issue of gays and lesbians in the military.

Today, we look back upon our forced detention of American Japanese in 1942 and the criminal excesses of the McCarthyism period with emotions ranging from unease to outright disgust and ask ourselves, how, in this supposedly free and constitutional nation, such things could have happened. Anyone asking that question need only read today's newspapers or watch TV news or talk shows to see the same kind of fear-ridden intolerance and bigotry rising again on an old issue.

The attitude of the Joint Chiefs of Staff and their military supporters is hardly surprising. They are, simply speaking, against change. They always have been. When President Truman said, back in the '40s, that blacks and whites should be integrated in the military services, they predicted that the competency of the armed forces would be destroyed. They were wrong. When women began to enter all-male units, they again sounded like "Chicken Little." They were wrong again. But, at least, they are now being consistent with their own history.

But the surge of virulent anti-gay sentiment that has burst upon us from all around is frightening and sickening. Call shows on radio and TV are being deluged with angry, frequently near-hysterical, anti-gay calls. Letter writers are filling the newspapers with hostility. For some peculiar and pathological reason, most men seem to feel that the shower room is the future battlefield. They babble on about fears that the gays will attack them physically there when they reach for the soap! They prate on about being in some foxhole together, as if the foxhole, in time of danger, was some kind of perverse aphrodisiac! They whisper that the gays might dance together in the barracks and then what would they do?

There are today, and have always been, large numbers of closet gays in the military. While serving in the Army during the Korean conflict, I was attached as a psychiatric social worker to the office of the post psychiatrist. I had a first-hand look at the issue of gays in the Army - and they were almost never a problem for their units. The few whose cases came across my desk had been apprehended by the M.P.'s in private, off-post circumstances, or had voluntarily come forward in an effort to gain discharge from the service. Most of the commanding officers of these men were surprised to learn of their sexual preference and referred to them as "good soldiers."

Gays and the military

Yes, the Joint Chiefs have their political reasons for the anti-gay stance, as do many congressmen who are responding to the flood of homophobic mail from home. But why a supposedly educated and enlightened near 21st-century populace should respond with such fear and loathing is puzzling. Some cite the Bible and speak of "abomination." Others are fixated with the idea that homosexuality is a learned state that is somehow "catching" and if they come too close they'll "get it," too. Some say it's all right but "they should just stay among their own." The latter, of course, has been said about every ethnic minority, as well, and, in either case, it is not in accord with the tenets of the U.S. Constitution which clearly call for equal rights for all. And, one of those rights is the right to serve one's country in one of the military services!

I believe that there are many brave and honorable gay soldiers, sailors and Marines now dead and buried in American military ceremonies. I am equally certain that, of those names so lovingly cared for on the black-walled Vietnam monument in Washington, many were gay. It is even possible that the man most revered of all, he who lies in the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, could have been gay. Why not?

Those homosexual men and lesbian women who wish to serve openly in the U. S. military are as much our heroes and heroines as all the others. They simply ask to be able to serve without fear. The rules of the military, except in the case of gays, are such that only seriously inappropriate action, sexual or otherwise, can be cause for discharge. These rules are more than sufficient to maintain the discipline the Joint Chiefs appear so worried about. Let's allow all Americans the privilege of proudly serving their country in the military service of their choice.

Similarly, it is time that we stopped attacking any segment of society merely for its personal sexual preferences. Human rights are the cornerstone of our society and to attack one group irrationally is, ultimately, to threaten all.

From Where I Sit

Old chapels that won't quit

by Frank Andrews

During this last flood that devastated so much of San Diego County, one disaster seems to stand out in my mind. The little chapel at Camp Pendleton was pictured in the newspaper as completely demolished - save for enough wall still standing to support the steeple and belfrey.

A quick call to the base librarian, Pat Carney, put me in touch with the very courteous Kathy Grayler, the historian for the Joint Public Affairs Department. Grayler gave me all I needed to know about the washed-out little chapel at Camp Pendleton.

The adobe building was built in 1810 as an outbuilding and a winery for the original Santa Margareta Rancho. When the Marines took over in 1943, the little building was rebuilt to be used as a chapel of worship and would be known as the Ranch House Chapel.

Although nearly all of the building was lost, the belfrey, steeple, and cross came out of the ordeal unscathed. Two of the three beautiful stained glass windows have already been found, along with antique candlestick holders and some very valuable paintings.

Although the chapel was used right up to the day of disaster, the future of the old adobe building is in question. Already, inquiries have been made of knowledgeable engineers, but, as of this writing, no decision has been made.

This church situation reminds me of a similar disaster up in Canada, but that church was destroyed by fire.

There is a tiny, lone chapel open to all, located on the main King's Highway just a little west of Emo, Ontario, Canada. It was built by two caring Christian men, Elmer Norlund of Emo and Ed Sletmoen of Rainy River, for the sole purpose of being used for prayer by the weary and thankful traveler.

I have gotten to know Elmer Norlund over the years during our many trips to this most beautiful area for our vacation and good fishing. We have used the "little chapel" many times to thank God for our safe journey.

In 1935 a local blacksmith hammered, riveted, and forge-welded a six-foot cross. It was then mounted high in the sky on the 20-foot steeple atop St. Patrick's church of Emo, Ontario. In August 1971, a lightning-caused fire completely destroyed this landmark church except for the 20-foot wooden steeple and the iron cross, which fell away from the fire and was not damaged at all. That, in itself, was a miracle.

Elmer and Ed were so inspired by how the steeple and cross were spared that they decided to build the Norlund Chapel to fit the old wooden steeple on land along the highway which was donated by Elmer. The tiny building is only 8 x 10 feet, but rises more than 36 feet towards the heavens.

The Norlund Chapel was opened on August 1973 and as of the summer of 1986 had been visited by over 90,000 of all races and creeds, some just curious and others to pray for safe journey along their way.

On the inside of the chapel there are small benches on either side to sit and an altar in front at which to kneel and pray. Elmer provides two registers in the chapel - one for the visitor's names and addresses and the other for prayer requests. Both books are filled with the names and comments of travelers from many lands.

Elmer maintains the "little chapel" himself except for any donations that come from the passers-by. Thank you, Dear Lord, for good Christian men like Elmer and Ed.

Bringing out the best

by Joseph Walker

To be honest, I didn't really know Aaron all that well. We had spoken, casually, a couple of times at church. I don't think he even knew my name.

But he touched my life during the short time I knew him, just like he touched many others. And it wasn't so much what he did or said that seemed to make the world a better place whenever he was around. It was just him. For Aaron had a rare gift to go along with that rare combination of diseases that complicated his life.

Aaron brought out the best in people.

I first noticed it in a crowded hallway after church. Aaron, a short, chubby sixth grader whose afflicted body didn't allow him great mobility, was slowly, carefully making his way around a corner. Suddenly an older, larger boy accidentally bumped into him, forcing him up against the wall and almost knocking him over. Fear gripped Aaron's face as he struggled to maintain balance on his crutches - a considerable task, even under the best of circumstances. Thankfully, he was able to steady himself against the wall. But his thick-rimmed glasses tumbled to the ground.

Anyone with glasses that thick was going to have a hard time finding them, I reasoned, so I moved quickly to pick them up. But Tim was quicker.

Now, I knew Tim. I was his little league basketball coach. He was bright, athletic and likeable, but not exactly a bastion of sensitivity, if you know what I mean. Then again, what 12-year-old boy is? Since I was well-acquainted with Tim's penchant for teasing and practical jokes, I was anxious to see how he would handle this potentially delicate situation.

"Hey watch it!" Tim called after the older, bigger boy. Then he picked up Aaron's glasses, looked at them to make sure they weren't broken, and returned them to their owner. "You OK, Aaron?" he asked, placing a hand on the smaller boy's shoulder.

Aaron smiled that embarrassed smile of his, nodded, and then turned to resume his dogged journey down the hall. Tim gave him a playful pat on the back and watched him for a moment. Then, he turned and hustled off in the other direction.

Suddenly, I had new respect for Tim, and I wondered where he had been hiding this wonderfully caring, compassionate side of his personality. But the more I saw of Aaron during the ensuing months, the more I realized that he had a lot to do with the kind way in which most people treated him.

You see, it's hard to be impatient with someone who tries so hard and complains so little. It's difficult to be unkind to someone who is so appreciative of any kindness shown. It's tough to ignore someone who has such a pleasant, unassuming disposition despite incredible hardship (including 33 major surgeries, countless radiation treatments and more lab tests than you can shake a stethoscope at). And it's impossible not to respect someone who always does his very best - no matter what.

I happened to be visiting his church congregation the first time Aaron was able to help distribute the sacramental communion. Since he couldn't cover much territory, he was only given a small area to serve. But he took his responsibility very seriously and performed his duties with dignity and grace, his anxiety betrayed only by the nervous smile that never left his face. I couldn't help noticing how many people in the congregation seemed to be watching Aaron, pulling for him step by halting step. And when he heaved a noticeable sigh of relief at the end of his service, we all sighed - relieved - right along with him.

That's the kind of impact Aaron had on people. He made us care. He made us feel. He made us think about someone else for a change - just by being himself. That's why an NBA basketball star took time out of a busy season to visit Aaron, to take him to one of his games and to give him a pair of his enormous basketball shoes. That's why a prominent religious leader cleared his schedule so he could spend some time with Aaron. That's why dozens of friends and family members got together recently to pay tribute to this courageous young man during a recent Saturday afternoon open house.

And that's probably also why my 14-year-old daughter Amy called me from school as soon as she heard that Aaron had died. "I didn't even know him very well, Dad," Amy said, emotion choking her voice, "But I don't know - I feel like I'm going to miss him."

I think I know how she feels - and how she hurts. But it's a good hurt. It has to be. After all, it's there because of Aaron. And, Aaron brought out the best in people.

Dana Quittner to assist college district

Grossmont-Cuyamaca Community College District Chancellor Jeanne Atherton announced today that East County civic leader Dana Quittner will assist the District's Governing Board in developing a legislative program which advocates the particular needs of students and communities served by the college district.

Quittner's role will include development of strategies to deal with massive problems in state budget support and extension of the District's interaction with economic development programs and activities.

According to Dr. Rochelle Bastien, Governing Board President: "This Board's staunch commitment to deliver top-quality, cost-effective education during dire economic times requires clear vision, innovation and a strong legislative program that help us advocate, forcefully, our concerns and recommendations."

"I am delighted that we are able to obtain Quittner's assistance; her extensive background in forging new and productive partnerships was particularly attractive to us."

"The District has many programs that are connected to the local economy," added Bastien. "Dana Quittner will be working with the governing board and the chancellor to pursue legislation to strengthen the interrelationship of business and education, linking college programs to the workforce of the future. This is an absolute necessity."

Quittner has an extensive background in intergovernmental issues and economic development. She joined the staff of former East County Supervisor George Bailey in 1985 as his Long Range Planning Administrator and was his Chief of Staff from 1991 until his retirement earlier this month.

The immediate past president of the East County Economic Development Council, Quittner has extensive knowledge of governmental issues and processes, and their linkage with the private sector.

Prior to joining Bailey's staff, Quittner was Director of Special Projects for the La Mesa Chamber of Commerce from 1980-1985 where she dealt with legislative issues and administered the Chamber's highly-successful job-training program.

Quittner has a long relationship with education in East County, having served on the Grossmont College Institutional Effectiveness Committee (1991-present). She also served as a member of the Grossmont College Vocational Education Advisory Board (1983-84) and as a trustee of the Grossmont Cuyamaca College District Foundation (1982-88).

Drought declared over

"The drought in San Diego County is over!" This definitive statement by Helix Water District General Manager Bob Friedgen finally puts to rest the quibbling that has been going on among water officials for weeks. "The drought is over and it is ridiculous to say otherwise," adds Friedgen.

Friedgen cautions, however, that there is a significant difference between drought, "which is a weather phenomenon," and water shortage, which is affected by supply, environmental regulation and politics. As an example, he cites the fact that water from the north will be shut off for four months this year due to environmental restrictions in the Sacramento delta.

On the positive side again, Friedgen notes that the rains have done wonders for San Diego County. "There is more local supply at this time than we've had in 10 years," he explains. "Helix Water District has gained 8,000 acre feet of water in January which is 20 percent of our total usage for a year." He added that the city of San Diego has gained even more with their large-capacity Loveland and Sweetwater reservoirs. On the other side, however, the Padre Dam and Otay Water districts have no storage and will still be forced to buy water.

Speaking of the Sierra snow-pack, Friedgen warned that some additional snow in February and March is still needed. Although the pack, which provides runoff to Northern California reservoirs, is extremely deep at this point, without additional snows it could lose some of its water density and provide a disappointing runoff. However, given its current storage and expected Colorado River apportionment, the Helix Water District appears secure for 1993.

Lemon Grove is moving!

All of the houses, trailers, apartments and business buildings in the Broadway Commercial Project (Home Depot) are disappearing. Some have been demolished, but most have been sold and are being moved to new locations by their new owners. Many of the houses and trailers are headed for Tijuana, including the Holaday homestead. The two apartment buildings will find a new location near Massachusetts and Central in Lemon Grove.

The city has moved rapidly to acquire all the property within the project area, and is now considering court action to close down the last business operating in the project area, Honda - Kawasaki of Lemon Grove. Owner John Neithamer has been searching for a suitable site for his business, but is running out of time, according to project manager Doug Yount.
